Family and persons deprived of their liberty

Within the execution of a sentence, Brazilian law upholds the respect for human dignity, the foundation of a Democratic State based on the Rule of Law. Thus, the period of imprisonment must be used to ensure the reintegration of imprisoned persons into society upon release.

There is a paradox within the law: how to expect individuals to better adhere to social rules by completely segregating them from society? Meeting such a great challenge, according to scholars, calls for raising some points on the development of a reintegration policy. Among them, we lay emphasis on:

- recognizing persons deprived of their liberty as subjects of law, i.e., their rights must be respected and guaranteed;
- a consistent policy of education, work, qualification and professional training and job creation within the prison system;
- programs that provide the maintenance of imprisoned persons' family ties.

Therefore, the high rate of recidivism within the penal system portrays how much this very system repeats the cycle that causes not only an increase in the prison population but also violence itself.

According to researchers, weakened family ties are sources of anguish that lead to psychiatric disorders and physical illnesses (SBARRA, 2015 apud SARDINHA & FÉRES-CARNEIRO, 2019).

Likewise, they emphasize that the lack of investment in parent-child bonds is a risk factor for alcohol and drugs misuse, self-mutilation and suicide (LEITE & ALVES, 2016).

In addition, it is necessary to emphasize that family members of persons in prison are also marginalized. They have to travel long distances to get to prison facilities, which are often completely inaccessible by means of public transportation.

According to the field research about family visitation carried out by the Institute of Applied Economic Research (Instituto de Pesquisa Econômica Aplicada/IPEA in Portuguese)¹, a citizen held in custody declared:

(Imprisoned Person) – case C: “The pat-down procedure is carried out by the prison staff, which is a source of embarrassment for our families. It’s very embarrassing for women, for families (...). What reforms an offender is to be respected, to have dignity. It’s the family that reforms them. Sometimes they think that offenders don’t care about their families: they care about their children, their wives, their mothers. They want their families to be respected”.

Source: IPEA. Field research.

In all prison facilities researched by IPEA, families were given a prominent role; the authorities in charge of the execution of sentences identified them as a key element in the reintegration into society process: “the family is vital for imprisoned persons’ social reintegration”. Those who are in the company of their families, always getting together with them, have great chances of reintegration from prison.

Family support for a person held in custody was considered the main motivation for their will to change, to stop committing crimes and never return to the prison system.

¹ IPEA, 2015. O Desafio da Reintegração Social do Preso. Uma Pesquisa em Estabelecimentos Prisionais. Texto para discussão / Instituto de Pesquisa Econômica Aplicada. [The Challenge of Reintegration of Imprisoned Persons into Society. A Research on Prison Facilities. Text for discussion / Institute of Applied Economic Research.]- Brasília : Rio de Janeiro : Ipea , 2015.

Family was a constant theme in the field research and it has deeply touched the interviewees, most of whom were absolutely attached to their families. They cherished them, as family members supported them and gave them credit. As they saw it, this was a motivation that gave their lives meaning and that contributed significantly to their “rehabilitation”.

According to the research, ‘family was their connection with the outside world. They considered family members’ visits as the most important moments of their lives, not failing to bring about, in an aggrieved tone, the situations of humiliation these individuals went through in the prison system’.

In the social aspect, the great benefit of virtual visits is the MAINTENANCE OF FAMILY TIES, especially for people in prison whose family members have limitations to travel to the prison facility, inter alia, the case of offenders from another country, from other Brazilian states, who have children legally underage from a previous relationship, or relatives with physical or age limitations, among other situations.

Research in the international context confirms that family members help in the reintegration process. It is a fundamental right that establishes and enforces a minimum standard of dignity regarding people in prison².

The purpose of visitation is to preserve the offender’s bonds with the outside world, especially to maintain their family ties and collaborate with their reintegration process.

Actions taken in many countries during the pandemic resulted in tougher prison measures, including the suspension of visits. In this sense, a real-time video visiting is a way to establish contact between offenders and their families, ensuring the maintenance of their emotional bonds.

² Contact with family is considered important for the mental wellbeing of prisoners and as an aid to reducing offending. <https://www.bbc.com/news/uk-northern-ireland-53179481>

Presentation: what is the International Video Visit – IVV (Visita Virtual Internacional/VVI in Portuguese)

According to data from the Information System of the Brazilian Penitentiary Department (Sistema de Informações do Departamento Penitenciário Nacional/SISDEPEN, in Portuguese), until June 2020, there were approximately 1,925 nonnational persons imprisoned within the Brazilian territory, most of them from Latin American countries³. As for Brazilian citizens, according to figures released, there were more than 3,500 of them imprisoned abroad in 2019; around 40% of them are held in custody in European countries⁴.

For a person who is deprived of liberty outside his/her country of residence, geographic distance in itself represents a major obstacle to face-to-face communication with family and friends.

Thus, an IVV consists in a meeting through video conferencing between a person deprived of liberty and his/her family and/or friends who are in different countries; this guide, therefore, provides useful information for those who need guidance or legal assistance to enforce such fundamental right.

Family visitation is a basic human right of people held in custody, important for the maintenance of bonds, resocialization and mental health. It is also closely linked to the exercise of other rights related to families, such as the right of children to maintain contact with their mothers and fathers.

Due to their importance, family visits are prescribed by several international laws within several countries, such as Brazil. Thus, we specified the main legal provisions on the subject, at both national and international levels:

- Brazilian Federal Constitution of 1988, article 5, items XLV, XLIX: The Brazilian Federal Constitution prescribes that a person in prison's right to physical and moral integrity must be respected and that the sentence must be imposed solely on the offender.

- Brazilian Law 7,210/84, article 41, item X: the law that prescribes the rules on the execution of a sentence in Brazil recognizes the right of a person held in custody to receive visits from his/her spouse, partner, relatives and friends on specific days.

- The Nelson Mandela Rules⁵: Rule 58: 1. Prisoners shall be allowed, under necessary supervision, to communicate with their family and friends at regular intervals: (a) By corresponding in writing and using, where available, telecommunication, electronic, digital and other means; and (b) By receiving visits.

- The Bangkok Rules⁶: Rule 26 - Women prisoners' contact with their families, including their children, and their children's guardians and legal representatives shall be encouraged and facilitated by all reasonable means. Where possible, measures shall be taken to counterbalance disadvantages faced by women detained in institutions located far from their homes.

- Principles and Best Practices on the Protection of Persons Deprived of Liberty in the Americas⁷: Principle XVIII - Contact with the outside world Persons deprived of liberty shall have the right to receive and dispatch correspondence, subject to such limitations as are consistent with international law; and to maintain direct and personal contact through regular visits with members of their family, legal representatives, especially their parents, sons and daughters, and their respective partners. They shall have the right to be informed about the news of the outside world through means of communication, or any other form of contact with the outside, in accordance with the law.

Who can request an IVV and how to apply for it?

People in prison and their families and friends can solicit the realization of an IVV.

The Federal Public Defenders' Office (Defensoria Pública da União/DPU in Portuguese) is part of such process as an institution that provides the necessary support and guidance to Brazilian citizens or nonnationals, as family visits to persons deprived of liberty are a right that must be enforced by prison authorities.

It is good to remember that the rules for holding a video meeting may vary according to the rules of the prison where the person is being held in custody. For example, an application for prior registration may be required, with proof of family ties/friendship through documents, declarations and/or certificates.

Requests for assistance to DPU may be submitted through the DPU Units located in several Brazilian cities, the Secretariat of Action in the Prison System (Secretaria de Atuação no Sistema Penitenciário Nacional/SASP in Portuguese) or the International Legal Aid Department (Coordenação de Assistência Jurídica Internacional/CAJI in Portuguese). Contact information is available on the website www.dpu.def.br and given in detail at the end of this booklet.

It is recommended that such request for assistance be made with basic information to identify the person in prison and the visiting person (full name, identification document, address or place of custody, telephone number, email address or other contact information, etc.). It is also important to describe, albeit briefly, the degree of kinship or affinity between the visiting person and the person in prison.

How does an IVV work in practice?

DPU checks with the prison authorities the possibility of making IVV viable after analyzing and qualifying an IVV's demand under specific internal rules. At this point, it is confirmed whether there is sufficient technical structure and any necessary requirements for the authorization of an IVV.

If it is possible to hold video conferences in the prison facility and the prison's staff authorizes the IVV, DPU will contact the visiting person to advise them on possible requirements, dates and times available for the visit.

Furthermore, DPU maintains contact with interested parties and provides the necessary assistance and guidance to ensure that the IVV is effectively carried out.

Other frequently asked questions about IVVs.

- Is it possible to make an IVV in all prison facilities?

No. Unfortunately, many Brazilian prison facilities still do not have the physical, logistical or technological structure necessary to carry out IVVs. It may also happen that the rules of the prison facility do not permit the performance of an IVV or restrict its possibility to certain people (such as only partners, sons and daughters).

If the person to be visited is deprived of liberty in a foreign country, DPU seeks to liaise with international partners to verify the feasibility of conducting an IVV, since the rules to be observed are those of the prison facility.

- I'm a visitor, can I make an IVV without leaving my house?

It depends on the rules and conditions imposed by the prison facility. In general, according to DPU's recent experiences, IVVs are performed through video conference applications from any device with internet access (mobile phones, computers, tablets, etc.) and the visitor does not need to leave their houses.

However, according to the prison's security rules and regulations, the visiting person may be required to attend a public institution (such as the Public Defenders' Office); continuous monitoring of the entire IVV may also be required.

If the visit cannot be made from home or the visiting person does not have access to the internet, for example, DPU articulates with partners (national and international) to try to overcome the difficulties and enable the visit.

- I am in a situation of deprivation of liberty, how can I apply for an IVV?

The right to communicate, in person or in writing, with family, friends, public defender or lawyer is another fundamental and inalienable right of a person deprived of liberty that must be enforced.

Based on this idea, anyone in prison who is interested in carrying out an IVV with a family member residing in a foreign territory can submit a request for assistance to DPU through written correspondence (letter) or through a third party that they trust in.

The most important thing is that the request is duly qualified with the identification information of the interested parties (full name, identification document, address, current place of custody, telephone number, email address or other contact information, etc.); and, albeit briefly, a description of the degree of kinship or affinity between the visiting person and the person held in custody.
